OLD BUSINESS (PUBLIC SPEAKS): None

PUBLIC SPEAKS (CITY BUSINESS): Kim Bell spoke about two programs, Ms. Grimes' "Clean" program and the layout she had given Council for helping individuals coming out of prison. She believes both programs would deter crime. She asked the Mayor to help her write a court opinion allowing people like her to run for government offices. Mario Elder spoke about his nephew, King Pleasant's case. He asked Council Members to join them in protesting to find different ways to help kids in the community and bring awareness to the damage guns can do. He believes young people need to be taught true values and find creative avenues to spend their time. Monique Elder also spoke about her grandson, King Pleasant's case. She feels there was negligence involved in the investigation and the DA treated her like she was the criminal. The point of their protest is to put the City on notice that noise and negative attention will be brought to Canton if she does not receive information on her grandson's case. Skylark Bruce also spoke about the King Pleasant incident and said that the white child who murdered this black six year old has not been held in account the way a black child would have been. She also feels that the Pleasant family has been treated more like suspects than victims. She believes there is a pattern in the criminal justice system that is designed to keep black people fearful. If Council Members contacted the prosecutor's office and the police department every day regarding the Pleasant family's concerns, she believes things would change. She asked Council to put "teeth" into their previously adopted Resolution declaring racism a public health crisis and address the needs that black people have brought to their attention. Eugene Norris was recently hired by the Stark County Minority Business Association. His goal is to work with minority businesses in the Canton community to help them be more effective, work with the growth of the City and become an integral part of what is happening on an economic development level. They are also working with the Elite Program where Canton is working with the minority community and the London Stock Exchange. DeVaughte Elder reiterated some of the same feelings as the prior speakers regarding the killing of King Pleasant. He stated that this is not a small problem and they won't stop until the blockage of justice is eradicated.
